Abstract

Workshop: Cluttering Understood and Successfully treated

Prof. Dr. Yvonne Van Zaalen and Dr. Isabella Reichel

At the present time, the nature of cluttering and its underlying neurolinguistic processes are well understood by many trained speech-language pathologists. Such professionals can perform a differential diagnosis of cluttering with other communication disorders. This workshop will introduce a few intensive training programs, using smart technology, that have proven to be effective in improving the speech behavior of people who clutter. Innovative procedures of these training programs designed to address the cognitive, emotional, and social components of cluttering will be covered as well.
